

Never Breathe Again

Mahogany Coopers broken heart is literally killing her. She doesn't believe she can survive the breakup of her marriage. She's unable to work, eat, sleep, and breathe. Her husband of seven years, Julian Cooper, has left her for his friend named Golden Thomas. Mahogany is devastated and feels as though the best remedy would be for Julian to simply come back to her. She believes that the only way to stop the pain. But both her best friend and her sister insist that she must face the pain that's causing her depression, and detox from the man whom she says she cannot live without. Will Mahogany survive losing her love, or will a broken heart be too much for her, and for him, to bear?
