

According to Their Deeds

Charles Beale lives happily in the shadows of Washington, D.C., as a respectable rare-books dealer. Or mostly respectable. He has a streak of the gambler in him and when a devoted client dies--a man deeply connected to the Justice Department--Beale eagerly regains the mans book collection...and soon finds himself with more than he bid on. In one volume, Beale discovers documents incriminating a host of major political figures--blackmail material that might have led to murder. Weighing questions of justice and mercy--and with a bulls-eye on his back--Beale must untangle a complicated knot of deadly lies and dangerous secrets.

This passage states that on the day when Gods righteous judgement will be revealed (which is clearly judgement day), God will render to each one according to his deeds, and goes on to describe the two categories of people. According to their deeds, accordingly he will repay, fury to his adversaries, recompence to his enemies to the islands he will repay recompence. (18) To his adversaries . . . The judgment is generally against all, in Israel or outside it, who come under this description. The word islands is used, Give them according to their deeds, and according to the wickedness of their endeavours: give them after the work of their hands render to them their desert. Give them according to their deeds, and according to the wickedness of their endeavours: give them after the work of their hands render to them their desert.
