

Slut: Diary of a Bored Housewife: Part 1

Summary Traditional middle-class housewife Mary gives up her Biology teaching job when she marries Johnson after a brief flirtation. He is a successful software engineer who works from home. Mary has enough to do with the cooking and the cleaning besides dropping the two kids to school and picking them up later in the day. Johnson does not trust the school bus. As long as Johnson worked from home, she enjoyed his company all day long. The situation changes after he sets up an office in the town and spends most of the day outside. Boredom sets in but Mary finds things to do like reading, television, movies, yoga, and meditation. She does not like gambling and card sessions. After a late evening party in the park with classmates that involves alcohol, drugs and tobacco and god knows what else, Mary underwent hallucinations and heightened desire for sex. In the permissive world, it is possible for her through social media and other means to find several lovers to satisfy her new found sexual passions. The little guilt and hesitation she initially felt are soon forgotten as she has the time of her life during those daylight hours between dropping the kids at school and picking them up. Pornography over the Internet and erotic literature keep her spellbound now. Some men treat her like a hooker, and one guy offered payment too. She tells white lies about being professionally occupied and meetings to avoid embarrassing situations. That party in the park did enhance her already buxom body with a spirit of desire. Just like she cannot avoid the gods of love, many men fall for her nebulous charms. A family vacation reminds Mary how far she is gone with the copulation stuff though she finds happiness in Johnsons arms. After returning from the vacation, Mary experiences depression and joins meditation classes to cope. She meets a depressed Bill there who recently suffered divorce with a pregnant wife. Bill is a nature enthusiast who does television shows in the forests and mountains. His rugged appeal attracts her no end, but she cannot imagine deserting her family. As Mary felt by instinct all along, Johnson has a secret lover too who carries his child. What follows is a double game of hide and seek! Johnson meets with a car accident resulting in a huge financial loss. Mary is kidnapped by the drug mafia, and Bill ends up paying a vast ransom for her release. Bill helps her out in the distress, both morally and financially. She will not consider marriage to Bill and sacrifice her family. Mary and Bill get a son through a surrogate mother after he insists. Secrecy continues in the clever hide and seek game but for how long. Sons are born to Bill through Mary and to Maybelline via Johnson. Things are settling down otherwise amidst all the secret passions. Is it possible to love two men and maintain two family lives simultaneously? Things are going fine so far! Life for Mary will never be boring ever again with two men to stoke her passions on a regular basis with no need of further sexual adventures elsewhere. Maybelline is a divorcee, and so is Bill. Their previous spouses do not directly relate with the diary anyway. Mary found a world of meaning in Bill, both amorous and otherwise. She did not separate from Johnson and the two children she loved more than anything. She did not indulge in drugs and liquor ever again. It seems that once is enough for some things in life like birth and death, marriage and enlightenment.
